FULL VACATION CARE PROGRAMS COMING SOON

A MESSAGE FROM THE MANAGER

Hey kiddos, families, and our awesome community!

Thanks for sticking with us on this wild ride through OSHC in 2023! This year has been jam-packed with new opportunities at Adventure Patch. We're thrilled with the progress we've made so far in growing to provide top-notch care for our little adventurers and their families. Of course, we're not perfect, but we're optimistic that we'll keep improving and making memories that'll last a lifetime!

Speaking of adventures, let me fill you in on our Vacation Care program planning process. We've got five services running Vacation Care across AP, and we've worked together to plan each and every day. So, even though your child might be attending your service, they'll also get to experience a little bit of the flair from one of our other services.

Now as you read the program you may be wondering, is this all that my child will be doing today? The answer: no way!

Our advertised programs are the icing on the cake, the advertisement is designed to be the 'extra special' part of our day. So, each day has a minimum of three extra special activities for every child to participate in. However, the foundations of our programs are in fact based on each individual interest, strengths, and likes. You would have heard before "Adventure Patch, Playing, Learning, Growing: Our Vacation Care programs are a great place to explain this. We utilise all three aspects of 'Playing, Learning, Growing' to build and run a Vacation Care. On the right, you can read through each aspect.

While we do plan all of these special activities, we always put the child first. We refer to this as 'Child Directed Learning,' so if a child comes to our programs and decides that they feel like doing something else than what was planned for them, we will always allow that (this does not apply to a safety issue). It is The Right of Child* to have control over decisions that influence them.

PLAYING

"Play is at the heart of childhood" - Adventure Patch Philosophy

It is so important for children to just play, have fun, and enjoy childhood. We also believe that many skills and knowledge are learned through play, but for this particular point, we want to ensure that our children can just play with no outcome attached. Just play for play's sake. This can be hard to write down because child's play is really intricate - good luck understanding the rules! So instead, we hold intentional space that, at times, allows the children to simply play. The role of our educators in holding space is to identify the play type and cleverly help without getting in the way of imagination.

LEARNING

There are many interests that come naturally to children as they develop. But then there are interests that they need to be introduced to, and in this way, we introduce topics to children that they can learn about. This is where the majority of our Adventures in the Vacation Care programs come from. With the skills and knowledge of our Intentional Teachers (Educators), we offer children the opportunity to participate in something new. Core to our Adventure Patch Philosophy is the concept of 'Learning in the Natural Environment'. This will always be evident in our programs because we believe that in the natural environment, "children learn to be curious and explore".

GROWING

The third component of our program involves fostering a child's interests. By incorporating these interests into our daily activities, we create opportunities for each child to develop their skills, strengths, and passions. Our educators use a process known as the "Planning Cycle," which involves observing and assessing a child's interests, planning future activities around those interests, supporting the child in implementing the activity, and evaluating its effectiveness. This approach is entirely child-centred and relies on cultivating each child's unique interests. Depending on the situation, this process may be tailored to an individual child or to a group.
